Charles Linckay in a Blave Pen.

The following is from a letter of Charles House, next to the County Council Office, Toronto. | MacKay to the London Illustrated News. On my first arrival at Non Orleans, I lingered for a few moments at the open door or a slave depot, without during to go in, lest I should be suspected of esplonage, or more curiosity, and eminent merchant of New York whose friendship I had been fortunate enough to make, and whom I knew was no dealer in or supporter of slavery; I walked in and joined his party, drawn thither, like myself by curiosity. . . Oo one side of the room the male blaves, with clean linea and shining new hat's and boots, were arranged; and on the other the females were disposed in their best attire, most of them exceedingly Life Assurance Society of London; neat; but some bedizened with ribbons, of collors more flaring and tawdy, then elegant and appropriate. I was frainediately assailed will entreaties to porchace.

I fult a censation namewhat similar to that he consulted at all hours, except when absent on of the first quality of sea sickness to be so ad dressed by my fellow creatures - a feeling of unusea in if I were about to be ill. I told the poor woman that I was a stranger, who had not come to buy. But they were incred uldus ; and when at last convicted, they re turned to their seats with a sigh and so expression of deep disappointment on their dark and good humored features. I entertained such a batred of elavery that, had it been my power to abolish it in one instant off the face of the earth by the mere expression of WATER STREET, NEWMARKET my will, at that instant slavery would have ceased to exist. I then walked to the male side of the mart where I was beset with similar entreaties, urged in every variety of tone of manner, and by almost every kind of laborer and handicraftsman, Some were accustomed to the cotton and some to the sugar plantation; some were carpenters, some gardeners, some coaclimen 7m17 some barbers, some waiters, but all equally anxious to be sold. Friend Gossip - What is a Highland Fling I' A few years since, while enjourning for a time out in the Buckeye State, your correspondent had the tattisfaction of hearing the above question answered, though in a rather demonstrative masher, and jo's way I am oure that could have left no doubt on the mind of the questioner, or any of those precent, but that it is a decided fast dance. In the barroom of the only tavern in M, a small village in the interior of Ohio were assembled a number of the characters who, after a day's work, were wont to convene at that place for the purpose of having a social chat over a glass of " Schoapps." They were mostly hard working, honest, jovial fellows, who fol lowed various trades and occupations and represented different nationalities. The conmon events of the day being exhausted, the conversation turned on the subject of dances. each of course praising his favorites. The at first mild conversation, however, soon turned into a spirited discussion, and was carried on principally by an Irishman, a strong, wiry, active fellow, and a Freuchman of tather more 'enough' than physical capability. But the cu, pinating p lat of the debate man yet to be reached. 'Now there's the Jig, for instance, takes the boots off anything they ever had in France, said Pat. 'Give an Irishman a piper and a twinty fut platform, and be'll dance agin the divil himsilf.
